CALL TO ACTION

On Protection from Gender-based Violence in Emergencies

Call for Application
Small Grants to Youth-led Organizations for Community-based Capacity Building in Gender-Based Violence in Emergencies.

Background

Empowering local organizations to accelerate the localization agenda is a key focus of the Call to Action. In this regard, the Call to Action initiative recognizes the role of Youth-led Organizations (YLOs) in empowering communities through skills development, education, mentorship, advocacy, and implementing humanitarian recovery, development, and peacebuilding programs.

UNFPA, the United Nations Population Fund, supports Youth-led organizations through technical support and guidance for effective service delivery, accountability to affected populations, organizational management and sustainable development. As part of its commitment to the Call to Action roadmap, UNFPA, in partnership with the American University of Nigeria (AUN) and with funding from the Norwegian Government, is supporting YLOs with micro-grants to enhance their capacity to respond to GBV in emergencies, including initiatives showing youth-focused actions in Sexual and Reproductive Health (SRH), livelihood and protection from sexual exploitation, abuse and harassment.

This call for applications aims to extend small grants to 16 eligible and successful YLOs across the BAY (Borno, Adamawa and Yobe) states to support them to articulate and deliver capacity-building actions at community level prevention and response to GBViE including youth-focused actions in SRH, livelihood skills development and protection from sexual exploitation, abuse and harassment..
